Report description:

Meals and soups are witnessing a slight decrease in volume sales in 2022, mainly due to the lack of stockpiling and the return to eating out in foodservice outlets post-pandemic. Products most affected include shelf-stable ready meals, dried and shelf-stable soups, and frozen pizza. Price inflation caused by the higher costs of raw materials, packaging, transportation and energy has driven up current value sales in 2022, weakening demand to some extent.
