Report description:

The outbreak of COVID-19 leads to an increase in home cooking, with consumers spending more time in the household and less time socialising with others. The home cooking trend has continued into 2022, especially since home seclusion and mandatory quarantine were still in place until May. Many consumers have continued to feel cautious about the virus's spread and avoid unnecessary outings, including dining out. Moreover, some people have adapted to higher levels of home cooking and now prefer hom...
