Report description:

Following a year of economic turmoil owing to the lingering impact of the pandemic in 2021, debit card transactions in both volume and value terms are starting to experience a recovery in 2022. Furthermore, following a decline in 2021, as consumers' incomes were under pressure and downtrading ensued, average spend per debit cards is showing a rebound, supported by rising inflation. The latter has surged on a global level, due to the war in Ukraine, which is resulting in fuel and food shortages w...
