Report description:

Norwegians tend to have a preference for clean, natural and scent-free homes, with the result that air care is not deemed a necessity by many consumers. Moreover, concerns over the impact of harmful chemicals on personal health and the environment placed downward pressure on sales of air care in both value and volume terms for most of the review period. While the COVID-19 pandemic provided a temporary halt to the declining sales trend, due to consumers' spending more time within the home, volume...
