Report description:

India Instant Noodles Market is expected to witness a CAGR of 5.6% during the forecast period (2022-2027).

The outbreak of COVID-19 and the resultant measures imposed by the Indian government have resulted in the strict closure of market to implement social distancing. Consumers preferred home cooked food and stocked essential food items at home in bulk, especially instant foods. The preference for home cooked food is expected to remain high even in the post pandemic. According to Mr. Kiyotaka Ando, the CEO of Nissin food holdings cooperative limited., the company registered a slight growth in its sales revenue and operating profit in the first quarter of 2020 compared to the previous years. Furthermore, the company has indicated that people preferred staying at home during the pandemic, which has boosted the market and is expected to boost the demand for this product type in the forthcoming years.

Over the medium term, the market is driven by the factor that the players coming up with a new segment of healthier noodles as the consumers in India have become more health conscious. Also, this has opened an opportunity for the players to tap on the innovation part on making instant noodles with functional benefits. Additionally, apart from the standard flavors, companies are coming up with new range of tastes and flavors, such as chinese, mix of masalas etc. This is going to further increase the demand for instant noodles among the children. Moreover, as instant noodles made from white flour was considered as unhealthy and players are coming up with noodles made from atta.

However, the raising concern about the health is the major restraint of the market, the unhealthy ingredients and the availability of other extruded snacks are expected to act as restraints to the market.
