Report description:

Demand for air care marginally increased in 2022, driven by home seclusion in the first half of the year following the fifth wave of COVID-19, which hit Hong Kong in January. Greater time spent at home ensured strong demand for popular formats liquid air fresheners, spray/aerosol air fresheners and other air care, with a wider range of new products launched by both established and new players. As families were primarily operating from home, they looked to increase their quality of life in their...
