Report description:

Limited-service restaurants players increased their prices as their costs rose in 2022. Higher costs were caused mainly by increased prices of energy and ingredients, especially in summer 2022. In addition, food prices were already on the rise, with wholesale prices of some ingredients seeing double-digit hikes. Some, but not all of the price increases were passed on to customers, as consumers facing reduced purchasing power would only accept a certain level of price increase.
