Report description:

A large proportion of outlets in this category are made up of stores that sell food by weight, mostly operated by citizens of Asian origin. During the pandemic, as a consequence of working from home, many of these stores had to shutter because their target was people who worked in offices, especially in downtown areas. Although new stores of this type have opened with the return of employees to their offices, the number of outlets has shrunk to well below pre-pandemic levels. This is also because...
