Report description:

Tissue and hygiene in Algeria saw slowed volume growth in several product areas across categories in 2022, with declines seen for some product types. This was in part due to waning consumer interest in stockpiling as COVID-19 began to recede and shopping patterns began to normalise. Persistent poverty also kept volume sales low, especially in rural areas, with economic pressures intensifying in the face of soaring inflation and forcing many consumers to trade down or entirely forgo some products...
