Report description:

The United Arab Emirates has a hot and dry climate, which can make it challenging to grow crops year-round. However, with the help of technology such as hydroponics and vertical farming, people are finding ways to grow their own food in limited spaces and using less water. Many people in the country are becoming more health-conscious and interested in eating fresh, organic produce. Growing their own food allows them to control what they eat and ensure that it is free from harmful chemicals. This...
