Report description:

The COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent restrictions in China, including the recent "zero-Covid" policy implemented by the government to control the spread of the virus, had a significant impact on local consumers' spending patterns. With lockdowns, travel restrictions, and social distancing measures in place, many businesses were forced to close, resulting in job losses and decreased incomes for many individuals. As a result, many consumers reduced their spending on perceived non-essential items a...
