Report description:

Baby and child-specific products saw positive retail volume sales in 2022, mainly driven by baby and child-specific sun care. With COVID-19 restrictions lifted, Georgians spend more time outdoors, including near the sea. In addition, growing awareness about the danger of sun rays encouraged consumers to protect their children's skin. Sun protection cream with high SPF (30, 50) remains the most popular sun care product for babies and children.
