Report description:

Modest sales growth was seen in beauty and personal care in 2022 as household spending remained under pressure. The exchange value of the kyat continued to slide in the wake of the 2021 military coup, although demand continued to increase as consumers began spending much more time outside of the home. Population growth, urbanisation, rising incomes and greater female participation in the workforce all spurred rising demand, although growth was confined to mass brands due to pressure on spending.
