Report description:

In 2022, traditional toys and games in Australia was impacted by high inflation, resulting in increases in unit prices. Inflation changed consumers' behaviour in terms of how much they spent on traditional toys and games, and when and where they chose to make those purchases. Consumers became more conscious about their budget, and limited their spending by choosing mid-priced toys over luxury items. The market showed a preference for toys priced between AUD30 and AUD50, and toy suppliers respond...
