Report description:

Market Overview:

The global electronic dictionary market size reached US$ 6.4 Billion in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 13.5 Billion by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 12.8% during 2023-2028. The increasing adoption of smart interactive learning concepts among the masses, the emerging trend of outsourcing of e-learning resources, and the growing need for fluency over the English language represent some of the key factors driving the market.

Electronic dictionary databases with software dictionaries are extensive and can contain up to 500,000 headwords and definitions, verb conjugation tables, and a grammar reference section. They can be used in the form of a language translation feature that helps in getting a better understanding of the various meanings of words. Bilingual electronic dictionaries and monolingual dictionaries of inflected languages often include an interactive verb conjugator and are capable of word stemming and lemmatization. They assist students by providing them with words that have a similar context or meaning when it comes to their usage. This technology is also used by specially abled children for catering to specific kinds of learning disabilities, along with aiding them overcome various facial and behavioral challenges and assisting them with intellectual impairment. Electronic dictionaries can be found in several forms, including software installed on tablet or desktop computers, mobile apps, web applications, and as a built-in function in E-readers, dedicated handheld devices, paid online products, and others.

Electronic Dictionary Market Trends:

The global market is primarily driven by the growing need for fluency in the English language and having a better vocabulary. This can be attributed to the widespread adoption of English as the official language for several countries across the globe. Moreover, a considerable rise in e-learning solutions resulting in a high consumer base is propelling the demand for electronic dictionary. In addition to this, the increasing adoption of smart interactive learning concepts among the masses, particularly the younger population, is impacting the market positively. The emerging trend of outsourcing of e-learning resources by large-scale companies is also acting as another growth-inducing factor for the electronic dictionary market. Favorable government initiatives promoting the building and improvement of school infrastructure for providing a better quality of education to the students are further creating a positive outlook for the market. Besides this, the increasing adoption of cloud-based services in the education industry, along with the popularity of ed-tech platforms, is providing an impetus to the market. Some of the other factors contributing to the market include rapid urbanization, the rising number of remote education centers, and extensive research and development (R&D) activities conducted by the key players.
