Report description:

The consumption of cider in Bolivia is primarily focused on holiday seasons such as Christmas and New Year celebrations, where it is typically used for toasting. Bolivian consumers have a preference for sweeter ciders, which they often pair with traditional breads like panettone and holiday meals. This sweet taste profile is particularly well-received by medium and low-income households, which make up the majority of the cider market. In order to cater to these consumer groups, most preferred ci...
