Report description:

Baby and child-specific products saw strong growth in current value and retail volume terms in 2022 with sales having picked up in response to the easing of COVID-19 restrictions and the return to more active lifestyles. The pandemic not only caused parents to exercise caution in terms of their children's hygiene but it also caused some to reflect on their purchasing decisions and the products they use on their kids. This has benefited sales of baby and child-specific products with parents showi...
