Report description:

Retail volume sales of headphones continued to decline in 2023, despite the increasingly important role they play in consumers' lives. In addition to providing a high-quality audio experience for music and other forms of entertainment, they can also be used for communication, such as when making phone calls or participating in video conferences. With more people working and studying from home in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, there was a greater need for high-quality, comfortable headphones...
