Report description:

Consumer foodservice has recorded an impressive recovery in 2021 and 2022 from the steep decline seen in 2020 due to COVID-19 restrictions. However, growth is expected to slow significantly from 2023 as high inflation directly impacts the industry in terms of rising costs as well as indirectly by putting pressure on consumers' purchasing power. Western Europe will see positive growth in the coming years, but will not return to its pre-pandemic sales level before the end of the forecast period.

Euromonitor International's Consumer Foodservice in Western Europe global briefing offers an insight into to the size and shape of the Consumer Foodservice market, highlights buzz topics, emerging geographies, categories and trends as well as pressing industry issues and white spaces. It identifies the leading operators and brands, offers strategic analysis of key factors influencing the operating environment - be they economic/lifestyle influences, new foodservice concepts, outlet locations, menu innovation or format development. The entire industry is considered, including both chained and independent operators. Forecasts illustrate how the market is set to change and what is the criteria for success.
