Report description:

In May 2022, Greece lifted all COVID-19 related regulations. This included the compulsory use of face masks and social distancing rules, and although use of face masks remains fairly high in Greece compared to other European countries, it appears that, in most cases, most consumers are returning to normal. The return to more normal lifestyles has resulted in a surge in respiratory illness. The re-opening of schools without social distancing rules also played its part in the increasing incidence...
