Report description:

Retail sales of sports nutrition products continued to grow strongly in constant value terms in 2023, despite restrictive measures on imports, as the government sought to protect its reserves. While the global creatine shortage led to some supply issues, these were less severe than during the previous year. Consumption of sports protein powder, which continued to dominate sales, was a key driver of growth, as consumers showed a growing interest in losing body fat and building a more muscular fra...
