Report description:

The average unit price of milk formula is set to see a double-digit rise in 2023 overall, due to inflation and rising production costs. The rising unit price of milk formula is set to result in a retail volume decline for this category in 2023, as consumers have been trying to reduce their overall spending on food due to lower disposable incomes. Due to regulatory restrictions, milk formula brands are not allowed to run promotional activities, which includes price discounts. This means that as g...
