Report description:

Baby food is facing challenges in Sweden, with the declining birth rate dampening retail volume sales. However, due to inflation and increasing production costs, baby food saw fast price rises in 2022 and continued to face growing prices at the beginning of 2023. This led to positive retail value growth but also caused media attention, with conversations focused on parents cooking more home meals to save money. As such, while retail value sales were positive, volume was down in areas such as dri...
