Report description:

In March 2022, as pandemic restrictions gradually eased, a coexistence with the virus emerged. Consequently, the number of confirmed cases began to peak, reaching new daily highs. During the initial two quarters of 2022, most consumers stayed home to prevent catching or spreading the disease, dedicating more time to activities like cooking and baking. However, from July onwards, consumers gradually grew less concerned about the pandemic, with some resuming their habits of dining out. The inclina...
