Report description:

Sour milk products are commonly preferred by lower-income consumers, who are particularly susceptible to price increases. These consumers often opt for such products due to their relatively lower cost compared with other dairy items, making sour milk an affordable and accessible source of nutrition. Maas (a fermented sour milk product) is an important protein source for many consumers in South Africa, regardless of their income. A popular way to consume maas is to combine it with maize meal (pap...
