MARKET DEFINITION

The Construction silicones used in the construction industry were introduced approximately 40 years ago. Silicones are a class of synthetic polymers. It is made up of alternating silicon and oxygen. Construction silicones are used only for construction applications such as roofing, sealing, flooring, glazing, caulking, etc. It is available in the market in various product forms such as sealants, adhesives, coatings, bonding, etc. Construction silicone is a long-lasting building material as it can withstand rain, weather, and sunlight. The unique properties of silicones allow for engineering structures and creative designs, such as suspended and curved structures or spectacular glass structures.

Construction silicones provide more flexibility in building structures by allowing materials to absorb movement and stress from earthquakes and wind. Construction silicones are used to make the building more energy efficient by preventing hot or cold air and humidity from coming inside through cracks and joints. The increasing demand for energy-efficient buildings leads to drive the demand for construction silicones in Europe, during the forecast period.
