Report description:

In 2023, mixed performances are expected in consumer electronics in terms of volume and value development. Despite the fact that volumes are expected to see a notable decline in 2023, current value sales are set to increase overall. This is primarily due to factors such as rising inflation as a result of further increases in energy costs, extended delivery times, and shortages in the production supply chain. Inflationary pressure had a significant impact on consumer confidence, leading to hesita...
