Report description:

In 2022, construction grappled with rising interest rates and living costs, affecting residential, industrial and commercial sectors. Government commitments to infrastructure drove demand. Despite cost surges, solid demand allowed passing expenses to consumers. Green building practices thrived amid environmental awareness. Developed economies faced setbacks, while emerging economies led industry growth. This report delves into industry dynamics, highlighting resilience and areas of expansion.

The Global Overview of the Construction and Real Estate Industry offers a unique insight into key trends shaping the industry world-wide and in the largest markets.
