Report description:

The driving force behind the growth of analgesics in India is the Millennial population, which includes those born between 1980 and 1994. This demographic, consisting of 328 million people, significantly drives demand for analgesics. The key reason behind their significant contribution to sales in this category is the prevalence of common issues such as headaches, body aches, and joint and muscle pains within this age group. Many Millennials lead professional lives characterised by prolonged per...
