The global pet food packaging market size is projected to grow from USD 11.1 billion in 2023 to USD 14.9 billion by 2028, at a CAGR of 5.9 % from 2023 to 2028. The pet food packaging market is driven by increased demand for pet food due to rising pet ownership, humanization of pets, urbanization, premiumization of products, and increased disposable income, particularly in developing markets, contributing to global market growth. This growth will likely stimulate the demand for pet food packaging in the near future.

"In terms of both value and volume, metal cans are projected to grow at the highest CAGR during the forecast period."

The segment of metal cans in the pet food packaging market is anticipated to exhibit the highest CAGR during the forecast period, both in terms of value and volume. This remarkable growth can be attributed to the rising demand for metal cans by a multitude of pet food brands. Metal cans offer exceptional protection against oxygen, light, and moisture, ensuring long-term freshness and quality of pet food products. They are recyclable, aligning with the growing consumer demand for sustainable, eco-friendly packaging options.

apartments and smaller homes.

"In terms of both value and volume, pet treats projected to be the fastest-growing segment in the pet food packaging market from 2023 to 2028."

Growth of the pet treat segment in the pet food packaging industry is attributed primarily to various factors, such as pet owners rewarding their pets with treats. The demand for pet treats has led to a large number of products in the market. This has led to an increase in the need for innovative packaging solutions for pet treats.

"The paper & paperboard segment is projected to lead the pet food packaging market from 2023 to 2028."

Paper and paperboard have garnered attention as major material types in pet food packaging for their eco-friendly and biodegradable properties that align with the growing consumer demand for sustainable and eco-friendly packaging solutions. Pet owners, increasingly conscious of their ecological footprint, prefer packaging materials that are recyclable and pose minimal harm to the environment. Paper and paperboard meet these criteria, making them an attractive choice for pet food manufacturers appealing to environmentally conscious consumers.

"In terms of both value and volume, the North America pet food packaging market is projected to contribute to the maximum market share during the forecast period."

North America is expected to take the lead in the global market due to robust demand, particularly from countries like the US and Mexico. This growth is driven by several factors, including a growing fondness for pets, evolving lifestyles, a preference for packaging that offers simplicity and convenience, and the increasing trend of treating pets as family members. To enhance the sales of their pet food products, companies heavily invest in advertising.

Nevertheless, the pivotal factor in attracting consumers and thereby influencing the overall growth of the pet food packaging market in the upcoming years is the uniqueness and innovation in packaging.
