Report description:

An energy boom, caused by the war in Ukraine, continues to bolster national coffers in 2023. That being said, global inflationary pressures is leading to rising prices. As such, cooking ingredients and meals is expected to register an increase in current value sales, though constant value and volume growth is expected to be much more moderate, as consumers trade down and cut back as much as possible. Meals and soups are expected to be the worst performer, with a double digit volume decline, Valu...
