Report description:

Sauces, dips and condiments is expected to register muted constant value and volume growth in 2023. Population growth continues to sustain volume growth, but with inflation still being high, there is a degree of trading down. Tomato pastes and purees continue to account for most volume sales, with mayonnaise, salad dressings and herbs and spices also being popular. However, barbecue sauce is expected to be one of the strongest performers in terms of volume growth, though from a low base.
