Report description:

In 2023, overall demand for retail edible oils in China has weakened compared with 2022, with the expected volume and current value declines in this year primarily driven by the resumption of normal activities post-pandemic. Towards the end of 2022 COVID-19 lockdown policies were lifted in the country, and in 2023, consumers have gradually returned to normal outdoor activities. This has led to a shift in dining preferences back to foodservice outlets, meals in the workplace, and in school cafete...
