Report description:

The cost of olive oil is on an upward trajectory in Norway in 2023, with this being driven by a blend of global and local factors. Adverse weather conditions in key olive oil-producing regions, such as drought in Spain, have impacted production, leading to a surge in prices. Additionally, market dynamics within Norway, including a contraction in the olive oil market in the preceding year, have further exacerbated the situation, making olive oil more expensive for consumers in the region. These p...
