Report description:

According to local sources, food prices have risen by their fastest annual rate in 32 years in New Zealand. Fresh fruit and vegetable prices are among the products impacted, including kiwifruit, potatoes and tomatoes. Growers have faced significant spikes for input costs, such as rising costs of fertiliser and a labour shortage, resulting in costs being passed on to consumers. This scenario was further exasperated by the crop damage caused by Cyclone Gabriel in early 2023. However, with consumer...
