Report description:

In 2022 and 2023, Germany was witnessing a surge in inflation, primarily driven by the escalating costs within the food industry. Processed fruit and vegetables, in particular, have been grappling with notable price hikes. These increases can be attributed not only to fluctuations in harvests, but also to the heightened costs associated with packaging, such as cans, and transportation. The realm of frozen produce introduces additional challenges, with escalating costs related to maintaining the...
