Report description:

The year 2023 marks a period of stagnation for the processed fruit and vegetables category in Latvia, with volume growth dropping to minimal. While the market is gradually recovering from the severe price inflation experienced in 2022, new economic challenges, such as rising interest rates, are impacting sales. Despite significant price increases and a noticeable shift towards more affordable alternatives, the category saw solid growth in 2022. This growth followed a dip in demand in 2021, with...
