Report description:

A mild winter in 2023 led to only modest volume growth for product areas such as jackets and coats and jumpers. However, temperatures were unusually low in late spring, with the summer season starting later than usual. This impacted sales of summer clothing, which typically begin to pick up in late spring, but in 2023 were postponed to July when temperatures started to rise. This, however, coincided with the onset of the summer sales season, whereby most summer clothing is discounted.
