Report description:

In 2023, staple foods has registered a marginal decrease in retail volume terms as consumers reduce consumption in order to save money. High prices remain an issue for Uruguayans and this is impacting negatively on demand. Furthermore, the availability of much cheaper staple foods in nearby Argentina is providing tough competition to retail sales in Uruguay. The significant price differential on everyday foods, such as packaged leavened bread, shelf stable products, breakfast cereals and rice an...
