Report description:

Demand for microwaves was already declining in Chile prior to the pandemic, with this major appliance already present in over half of local households. Historically, there has also been a lack of important innovation to attract consumers. Access to financial liquidity, through government support to help drive the local economy in the face of the pandemic, resulted in a marginal uptake of microwaves in 2021, before falling once more. While demand is stabilising in 2023, this is mainly being drive...
