Use of Induced Pluripotent Stem Cells in Regenerative Medicines Drives South & Central America Stem Cell Therapy Market

Per the Frontiers Media S.A. 2023 report, progress in the field of induced pluripotent stem cells (iPSCs) has opened a new gateway for research in therapeutics. iPSCs are mainly intended for research and clinical studies such as disease modeling, regenerative medicine, and drug discovery/drug cytotoxicity studies. For example, iPSCs can be used to convert differentiated somatic cells to multipotent stem cells to generate different cell types of adult tissues. Thus, iPSCs have shown promising results in regenerative medicine, particularly for replacing diseased or injured cells. iPSCs are widely used to regenerate tissue-specific cells for transplantation in patients for treating injuries and degenerative diseases. Studies such as drug discovery involving screening of small molecules and toxicity testing for safety assessment have been successfully disclosed positive iPSCs-based results. The aforementioned factors are expected to offer lucrative growth opportunities to companies in the South & Central America stem

South & Central America Stem Cell Therapy Overview

The government and healthcare authorities in Brazil are implementing constructive strategies to increase the awareness and exposure of stem cell therapies in the countries. For example, providing international exposure, the authorities are focusing on conducting clinical trials in the country. For instance, according to clinicaltrials.gov, in 2016, around 27 stem cell studies were being conducted in the country, which accounted for an estimated 1.7% of all the stem cell studies across the globe. Also, the country allotted around US$ 5.0 Mn for stem cell research at the starting beginning of the entry in the stem cell domain. Increasing awareness in the country is fueling the growth of innovations and discoveries in the stem cell market. For instance, in 2017, R-Crio, a Brazil-based startup, discovered a way to produce around 7 million stem cells from a single baby tooth. These factors are likely to drive the growth of the Brazil stem cell therapy market during the forecast period.
