Report description:

Western European snacks sales were relatively unaffected by the pandemic, other than showing a slight demand spike in retail value terms when COVID-19 hit the region in 2020. However, high inflation in the post-pandemic period negatively impacted the snacks performance across the region in 2022 and 2023. Nevertheless, Europeans' love of their favourite little indulgences is expected to ensure positive growth over the forecast period, even in the face of rising health consciousness in the region.

Euromonitor International's Snacks in Western Europe global briefing provides a comprehensive overview of the Snacks market, providing insight on sales and market potential, retail distribution and company and brand shares. Analysis identifies emerging geographies alongside growth opportunities in the most developed, highest value countries. It also offers strategic analysis of the key trends shaping the industry and consumer demand, such as health and wellness, sustainability, the evolution of eating occasions, in addition to ongoing considerations of convenience and value-for-money in the post-pandemic world. Insight into how these trends are shaping demand in <|Year|> informs forecasts to 2027, clearly indicating how the market is expected to change.
