Innovations in Product Selling Models Fuels South & Central America B2B Food Marketplace Platform Market

Companies are concentrating their efforts on enhancing their production capacities, go-to-market processes, and digital activities (such as e-commerce presence and scale expansion). The COVID-19 pandemic has encouraged every firm to make reforms in their marketing strategies post normalcy. Every organization, big or small, has been concentrating on developing new business models to meet changing customer needs. For example, PepsiCo Inc. has launched its direct-to-consumer (DTC) websites Snacks.com and PantryShop.com in response to the increased demand during the COVID-19 pandemic. Both websites are aimed to gain profit from the growing trend of e-commerce among customers to satisfy their food and beverage demands amid the current health crisis. PepsiCo is promoting its Pepsi, Frito-Lay, Gatorade, Quaker Oats, and other well-known brands on these sites. Such initiatives influence other businesses to innovate their online marketplaces based on demand. Thus, such innovations in product selling models are likely to provide growth opportunities to B2B food marketplace platform providers in the coming years.
