Report description:

Despite a decline in the number of COVID-19 cases, demand for analgesics continued to grow in 2023. This was partly due to the revival of pre-pandemic behavioural patterns, including the cessation of mask wearing and social distancing, which meant that consumers were more susceptible to colds, flu and other illnesses, thereby increasing the need for systemic analgesics, such as acetaminophen. The return of international tourists, especially from China, following the lifting of travel restrictio...
