Report description:

Although they face stiff competition from glass bottles, metal beverage cans continued to gain share as a pack type for lager in 2022. This is because metal beverage cans are lightweight and easy to handle, making them convenient for on-the-go consumption. They provide secure and protective packaging for lager and are less prone to breakage than glass bottles, reducing the risk of accidents during transportation, storage or handling. Metal beverage cans also have excellent cooling properties, al...
