Report description:

Hong Kong is a popular tourism destination for mainland Chinese, many of whom bring back confectionery as gifts for family and friends, with the pandemic almost completely choking off this demand in 2020. However, tourism had already been weak even before COVID-19 struck, due to social unrest being seen in Hong Kong. This, allied to some retail closures as well as the loss of some on-the-go custom due to the street protests, meant that Hong Kong had already seen a major decline in its confection...
