Report description:

In 2022, demand for the leading pack type within confectionery, flexible plastic, continued to grow. This was because confectionery products are often sensitive to moisture, air, and light, and flexible plastic packaging can provide a barrier against these elements, helping to maintain the freshness, flavour, and texture of the products. Additionally, as confectionery products are often consumed on the go, flexible plastic packaging offers portability and convenience.

Euromonitor International's Confectionery Packaging in Romania report offers insight into key trends and developments driving packaging across the category.
