Report description:

In 2022, total packaging volumes of processed fruit and vegetables turned to marginal decline. This was after two years of strong growth during the pandemic, when consumers spent more time at home and cooked more at home and stockpiled food. There are only two pack types with a presence in this category, metal food cans and flexible plastic. In 2022, flexible plastic witnessed an increase in its pack type share for processed fruit and vegetables, as it is the only type of packaging used for froz...
