Report description:

Metal food cans continue to be the main packaging format used in both shelf stable meat and shelf stable seafood in Poland. Canned seafood, particularly fish, is a low-acid meal ingredient or solution that rapidly promotes the growth of microbes if not properly packed. Metal food cans, which are hermetically sealed, solve this problem by providing maximum freshness and minimising contamination because they are impermeable and can resist heat. Food packed in metal food cans also does not require...
