Report description:

The positive performance of consumer foodservice in 2023 was driven by the lifting of COVID-19 restrictions in March 2022. However, high inflation was seen from the last quarter of 2022, coinciding with rising consumption of heat, gas and electricity due to the cold weather. This led to a noticeable reduction in growth for foodservice. Moving into 2023, a return to eating out was registered, as utility bills reduced, increasing disposable incomes.
